

Notice Regarding NHI (National Health Insurance) Premiums FY2022

1 Calculation of premium

Premium of national health insurance is calculated based on the total income the insured earned in Japan and the number of members his/her household with a year during April of a year through March of the next year as a unit (fiscal year). ※Refer to diagrams below.

Every year premium is finalized in June when the income of the insured for the previous fiscal year is finalized. The payment of premium is to be done in ten-time installment of the aggregate of premiums from April of a year until March of the next year.

Premium starts to be calculated as of the day when the insured registers him/herself as an international resident, the day when the insured moves into Meguro City, or the day when the insured loses his/her eligibility as an insured for any public insurance system other than NHI. The timing is irrelevant to the insured's delay of notification on application, so the insured is requested to file an application for the national health insurance within 14 days since when either of the above three cases arises.

※Premium is calculated by month, so premium applies to the insured even if he/she enters the premium at the end of a month.

※Premium of national health insurance is the aggregate of the basic premium calculated based on the total income of the insured earned in Japan during January through December of the previous year. So when the insured had an income of the base amount or above during the previous year, he/she will be required to pay his/her per income premium in addition to per capita income.
